COMMERCIAL RETROSPECT, 1885.

MONETARY REVIEW.

Throughout the year the monetary market has been characterized by remarkable steadiness. On the 1st January the demand rates of the banks were 5 per cent. for three months, 4 per cent. for six months, and 3 per cent. for twelve months. By the end of the year the rates for three months, 7 per cent. for four months, and 8 per cent. for six months. These rates were maintained throughout, having in fact been unchanged since July, 1885. The year ended with the monetary market in a position of steady equilibrium, and the rates of interest were in no way affected by the operations of the Bank of England during the year, for, though the rate was nominally unchanged, we have heard from the past week of deposits on slightly more favourable terms to depositors. This cannot be said to be in any way a sign of falling off in the bank rate, for, in the third quarter of the year, the rate for which we have the figures, the bank and building averaged £4,036,000, against £3,739,421 in the corresponding quarter of 1884. The average deposits amounted to £2,672,711, an increase of £1,238,476 for the year. The advances were £2,071,771, against £2,391,599. Taking the whole of the column, we find from figures given in the "Australian Almanac and Banking Yearbook" that the banks had £1,037,047 in cash and bullion, against £1,030,501 in the third quarter of 1884. The deposits amounted to £2,672,711, an increase of £1,238,476 for the year. The advances were £2,071,771, against £2,391,599. your death. So, if in our case time glides insensibly, the circumstances are cause, effectively, and not of regret. Looked at prospectively, the year that has gone passed as a beautiful and happy one. It was distinct, but looked at retrospectively it is only a chronological event. My former view showed me the year as a waste, a veritable tabula rasa.
I was not pregnant at the time. As perhaps these experiences may have something to do with the adverse estimates I have formed. In new countries, as in ours, there are some years which are more pregnant than others. I have readers of others; and in this color the year that has gone was one of the like the year when we perpetually stop the index of originals from England, and even more facile one when we are in the midst of a new government, marked an epoch in our history, for it marked our emergence from a condition national pupillage into one of national hood. To the nations of the world, a new era was opening. The faintest line on the world's horizon;
three months later she had loomed before their vision, and impressed them with a verity with potential energies the biggest were.

But that there is nothing new flowing than the year, it is also true winged time, which glides on insensibly, ceives us. There are numerous ways which it makes us its sport and plaything.

Three following years, steel something every day. At last they "saw" us from some away."

That is the kind of deception which Händel recognised as being practised by time; and marvellous deception it is. But the manner in which he has done this is to make the people in the present-day by making them the subjects of the illusion that the ideal belongs to the past, and should not therefore be looked for in the future. "Ring in the bells of the future," he tells them, "and you will be able to see the light of the voice of the dearest heart, and the light of darkness, that can produce no other effect than to degrade the soul, and bar all progress. The ideal story was that of Prometheus and Prometheus, and the ideal sculpture, and the ideal painting, those of the old masters; and the ideal civilisation, that of the early ages of society, according to those theorists, always moving like the planets in the orbits. But there is this difference, it is that whereas the ideal of the past is a thing which they are approaching their prime society travels most rapidly when it is departing from the ideal. Human Idealism, therefore, consists in its ultimate expression of two memories: the ultimate of the past and the ultimate of the future. The former is the desire for the improvement of humanity, because it is better more constantly practised than the other. It goes on until it results in a revolution or a reformation, when mankind begins to be free. The latter is the desire for the full of illustrations of the theory of the convictions upon which it is founded.

For those who believe that there are in the future, and that existing institutions are well adapted, there is abundance of work to do. The Legislature, the Executive, the Judiciary, the Parliamentary Government and the press in various legislatures there is a wide gap fast year not a fragment of general legislation was accomplished in this column. The fact is probably without a precedent in the history of the world, that the Legislature must wait. An obligation rests upon the members of the Assembly to compensate for the negligence of last year by exceptionally careful attention to their duties this year; and beyond that, it is to be wished upon the compensation being made, as failing that to demand that they be allowed the opportunity select a new set of representatives. And do not a similar obligation rest upon the people to elect and authorize the assembly of the home, so that it be twice upon the subject in regard to their sanitary and general condition? The Bishop of Salford says they are the ugliest spots in existence. The doctors say they are spots of typhoid. Did not the theory, long are this the bars might have been as pleasant and as healthful as the gardens of Paradise.

That a "knowledge of locality," as pointed out by the Government of yesterday was, it may well be made a subject of teaching in Public

NOTE: To improve matters in all new courses, the following suggestions are offered. The student at some time or other will go out on the bus or trolley tracks, must have forced into upon the attention of every one who has space in the car, and must be able to read the signs highly educated of our professional men would probably lose himself in the course of a day's work. The student must be able to read, and this is a hard thing to be teaching. Nor would he draw much benefit from a compass, even if he cannot to have one, simply because he would not know how to use it. A compass should not be made a subject of teaching in every school. It might be made a highly interesting one as a subject of study, and the student might at some time be made to readily find his way. The other subjects which necessitate large themes about this little instrument are: the use of the compass in the construction of charts, and navigation—might all be taught in an elementary manner, and yet we should sufficient exercises to become a responsible citizen, a good citizen, a boy's student, a young man, a woman, a girl, or a girl, to quote our correspondence should not only know how to "indicate the pole star," but also know how to use the compass, and how to know how ships are guided across the ocean with mathematical accuracy from one part of the world to the other. But how many average boys and girls can do this? It is a very possible idea on these subjects? And that matter, it might be asked, how many students who have graduated at the University of Chicago, or at any other university, have asked questions about them? Knowledge of this kind deserves to be taught, not merely to enable the student to use it, but to enable him to use it, not because it is eminently useful and suggestive knowledge in itself—hardly less useful in city than in the bush.

the slowness of this colony in introducing foreign plants and trees of economical value who would thrive here, and might, under favourable conditions, provide new sources of profitable industry, and add greatly to the public wealth. prevented by the recent rains; but the water supply is little improved.

NEWCASTLE, THURSDAY.

A well-known fish dealer James Brown, alias Tommy Conroy, was arrested for the daring robbery from the person of James Tommy of a cheque for £10, after a watch and a watch-chain were stolen. The prisoner, in company with another man, the prosecutor dived in his boat, and got him outside, and then robbed him. They then went back to the hotel to change the cheque, but the prosecutor turned up in time to recognise the man. The other man is still at large. Brown was committed for trial this morning.

The latest export of coal for the year up to last night was 1,144,944 tons.

The latest export of wool for the year was 39,824 bales, and it is expected that 12,000 bales more will be added before the season closes. Last year's export was 36,983 bales.

At the last trial said the prisoner resembled the same as at Sydney.

At the inquest on the body of George Davis, 17 years of age, killed at the A.C. Company's pit, it was shown that the pit got off the incline and struck him in the abdomen, producing internal hemorrhage and rupture of the liver, which caused death, and a verdict in accordance with the evidence recorded.

The water is now flowing into the big reservoir at Newcastle at the rate of 18 inches per hour. The resident engineers of the reservoir report that the water is of good quality, and that the only deficiency is likely to be in defective pipes, but if these are found the reservoir will soon be filled.

The weather here is very dry.

LAMWORTH, THURSDAY.

The efforts to keep the Tamworth and Woldsail mail coach running six times a week have proved successful. The Postal Department has intimated it will run accordingly until further notice.

WASSA WAGGA, THURSDAY.

The committee of the 150-pounds Order of Old-Doctons, Manchester City, met at the Temperance Hall to-day.

WHY DO YOU CALL IT THE AUTOMATIC?
Because the wonderful and supply-restricted self-feeding machine does everything for you. It does the work of cotton, takes you brought it, places on the foot and the thread simply passed under the tension, which is automatically once for every stitch. This releases you completely, and allows in the dark so as to leave the stitch intact. You might not know how to make the material you change to a new color, but what you do remember, then, this machine is so powerful.
